Palacios is a man in his forties who is trying to move away from his most recent profession: contract killer. A stroke of luck in the form of a very well-paid job seems to make retirement a possibility, but once the job is done everything starts to become complicated and both his payment and his own integrity are in grave danger. In order to receive his money, Palacios finds himself obliged to navigate a world that is completely alien to him: that of high-stakes finance and shady urban development. On this journey, full of encounters with a past scarred by unhealed wounds, he will discover the real meaning of words like friendship, love, betrayal and vengeance. A journey through the working class suburbs of Madrid and the luxury buildings owned by the upper classes which will lead to situations where life or death...
