Two girls chatting on the phone while they wait for the guests. In the street shots and explosions are heard, until one day the television starts to speak to them, encouraging them to flee. A poor devil serving tables dressed as a Buddha, thanks to a technology that makes you gain or lose 100 kilos and fuses with your body at DNA-level; his problem begins when the software that manages his suit of flesh stops working. A minister who receives instructions to take part in a development scam that turns out to be something else much darker. The drains, individuals who, after being plugged into a computer, generate audiovisuals based on their experiences and are the stars of a television show set in an Andalusia that has become a sovereign state after a fratricidal war. Two homosexual men on a high, looking for a sign, lying in bed looking at a box of options.
