Pablo R. Burón transports his first novel to a future Spain dedicated solely to tourism. "Welcome to Turistia, the future now", and takes us on a tour through a fictitious country where we all work together to make our own tourist city the most-visited place in the world. In this destination you will be the star. Whatever you desire is at your fingertips, including a choice of exclusive experiences that will bring you unprecedented pleasure. This unsettling dystopia fictionalises a deep critique of an industry sustaining an irrefutably unsustainable touristic model, and it does it brilliantly, through original ideas that are cogent and too scarily plausible.
